

The 1900s- 1906

Delta Kappa Phi Brothers represented 12% of the total student body in the 1905 - 1906 school year, with 18 active Brothers. Fraternities were seen as both evil and necessary. It was not uncommon for hazing to occur publicly and school supported. In addition to DK, both Phi Psi and Omicron Phi were active fraternities on campus. This is the earliest list of Brothers. It includes Beta # 1 George Boyd. You will notice that Alumni are identified as "honorary Members'.

Chapter Roll

ALPH	PHILADELPHIA TEXTILE SCHOOL
BETA	LOWELL TEXTILE SCHOOL

The 1900s- 1907

In 1907 36% of students were in a fraternity.
 1/3 of those were Dekes. There were no women enrolled at Lowell Textile. Pawtucket Street had trolley tracks running through it. The school was just one building. DK couldn't figure out what to call those guys that had either graduated or left school, as now they are Associate Members. Delta Kappa Phi had parties. Just a bit more elegant than today.

Below are more pictures from 1907

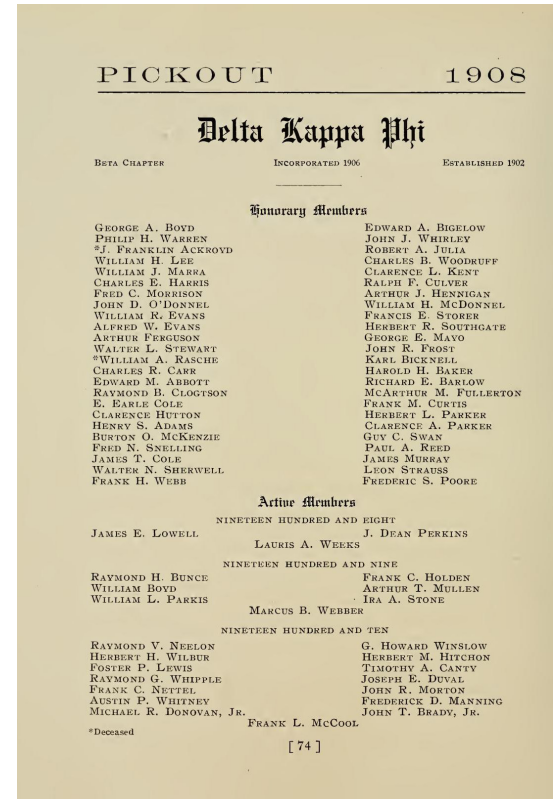

PAWTUCKET STREET

The 1900s- 1908

Delta Kappa Phi had swollen to 25 active Brothers, almost 19% of the student body. It's clear that with total fraternity membership approaching 50% of enrollment, that Greeks had a major influence over the goings on at campus. On a more curious note, tobacco was not allowed on the school side of the bridge and pipe smoking was not allowed on the streets of Lowell. Controversy was a brewing at Lowell Textile. Fraternities, with their significant numbers were influencing the school at every level. Some folks didn't like it too much; as the editorial below alludes to.

The 1900s- 1909

In 1909 Delta Kappa Phi was 20% of the total student body and the dominant house on campus, with 34 Brothers. It appears Trustee election's were being held for the first time, and with Associate/ Honorary/Alumni Brothers representing such a large and active portion of voters, there was angst around who would be elected.

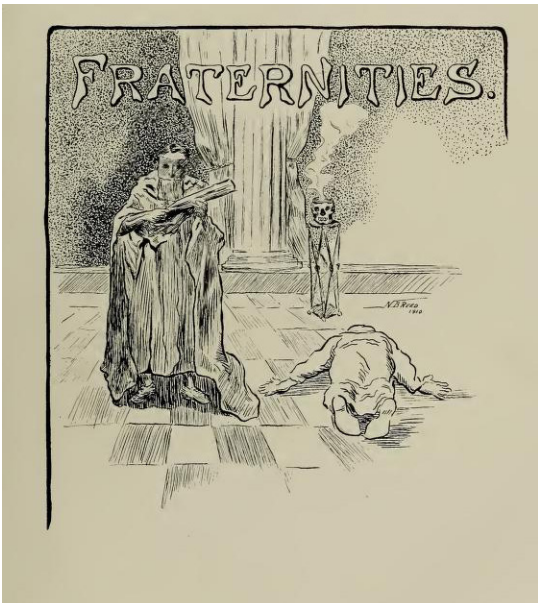

"TO THE ALUMNI: And what of the Fraternity? Are they a menace to the welfare of the school, tending to disintegration? Not necessarily. The proper sphere of the fraternities is social. They are humanizing & delightful when composed of congenial spirits. Here personal life friendships are formed, and as they reach out into numerous chapters they broaden one's acquaintance and become a valuable asset in life...The active influence of your fraternities would be disastrous to the growth and influence of the school, if exerted to magnify the importance of one department at the expense of another, in awarding athletic prizes, in marking standards of scholarship, or in the election of graduate trustees. In the latter case it would be fatal to the further representation in the Board of Trustees."The thought of Dekes running the school terrified administrators. Of course, there would have been no new machine, but likely the largest cold tap system and loudest sound system 1909 ever saw! How about that first paragraph? How true is that to this day.

The 1910s- 1910

The first documented House- circa 1910. It was located on Powell St. in the Highlands section of Lowell. The exact address is unknown. In 1910, the Brotherhood of Delta Kappa Phi represented just over 19% of the total student body.

To the Boys of the Delta Kappa Phi

An Echo of the Dance

Now there's Francis P. Madden, the boy with the hop,
 And wherever he is someone yells "Heigh there, Doc!"
 He's certainly a chap of the greatest renown,
 So there's nothing too good for him in old Lowell town.
 Now his room-mate, Mr. Church, is the grand Bean Brummel.
 For he's broken the heart of many a belle.
 Next on our list comes George, the dear boy,
 Who has given his heart to a Winthropite coy.
 Now we cannot blame him for she's surely a peach,
 But there's plenty of "Lowell buds" just within reach.
 I almost forgot his college chum, Jim,
 Who made such a hit with his good-natured grin.
 The next one I think of is dear Mr. Cleary,
 One chap in a hundred, who never looks weary.
 Oh! and his friend, I think his name's Sam,
 Who, when at school, is a very studious 'man,
 And now I am thinking of that famous night
 When we danced the "Boston" and did it just right.
 Mr. Folsom is next and though he tries to be good,
 He wakes up the house with his password, "Hea wood."
 Now little "Bill Casey," the next I recall,
 Should be Number One on that famous roll-call:
 He's the neatest and sweetest little chap that I know,
 But there, it would not do to tell the boy so.
 I think I neglected our friend, Mr. Plummer,
 The boy that can dance and sure is a hummer.
 Dearest Chick Rayner, whom we all know about,
 Is what Doc would call him, "One good old scout."
 Now boys, I have tried to get you all right,
 And I think I have said quite enough for tonight,
 I sincerely trust that I did not offend,
 As I want you to know I am yours to the end.

DELTA KAPPA PHI

The 1910s- 1919

There is currently no information from 1919.

The 1920s- 1920

1920 found the Brotherhood up to 51 active members...and on the move again. This house on 115 Mount Vernon Street is clearly bigger to accommodate a growing Brotherhood perhaps?

Below are more pictures from 1920

Delta Kappa Phi Smoker

On January 21, 1920, Beta Chapter held their Freshman Smoker at the Spaulding House on Pawtucket Street. About one hundred twenty-five students and instructors were present. Mr. Charles Ellis gave some clever impersonations of Harry Lauder and sang some Scotch songs.

A four-round sparring bout was staged by Tommy Falls and Al Dimond, who mixed it up in a lively manner and created a great deal of interest.

Refreshments were served by C. E. Babcock, caterer, after which the evening was spent in card-playing, speeches, and music.

Delta Kappa Phi

On January 30, 1919, the Freshman Smoker was held in the Pawtucketville Boat House. A large number of Freshmen were present to hear Brother Roberts' account of his experiences overseas. An interesting program was furnished, and refreshments were served. In the opinion of all who were present, the smoker was a huge success.

The initiation was quite spectacular both on the street and in the classroom, and the "stunts" performed under the shadow of the paddle were interesting and amusing (to all except the Freshmen). The period of torture was brought to a fitting climax on Friday evening, March 7, at Keith's Theatre, when the candidates for admission entertained the audience with a program that would shame Shakespeare or Al Jolson. To quote from the Text of March 13, "It is doubtful if such a combination of finished and internationally known actors have ever been assembled at one time upon the stage." Nary's song, "The Irish Kaiser," sung (?) to the tune of the "Wearing of the Green", brought forth such a perfect deluge of offerings from orchestra, balcony, and boxes, that he was compelled to withdraw.

On May 24, 1919, the Beta Chapter of Delta Kappa Phi closed its school year with a reunion and banquet at the New American House in Boston.

On November 25, 1919, Mahoney, Shanahan, Vogel and Woodhead were admitted to Beta Chapter.
